Architectural Design Handbook

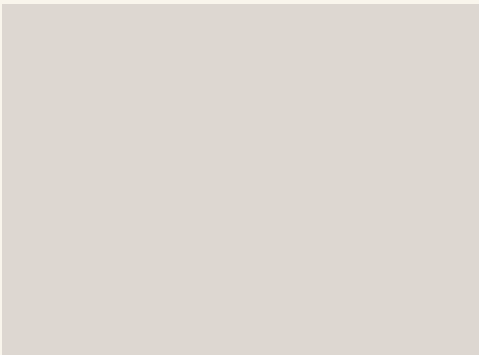

PREVIEW

PINE CANYON FLAGSTAFF

mountain homes like no other.

As the Walnut Canyon community emerges within Pine Canyon, a broader spectrum of design freedom will be encouraged. One that, as shown by these sketchbook examples, explores a fresher and more contemporary approach to the architecture appropriate to the tall Ponderosa pines of Northern Arizona. One that explores an open indoor / outdoor feeling of design. One that celebrates the land, and makes the home sites and architecture one. All that is good about the current architectural styles at Pine Canyon will be welcome, but due to the quality of these home sites more design freedom will be encouraged with the goal of making Walnut Canyon one of the finest communities of its time.

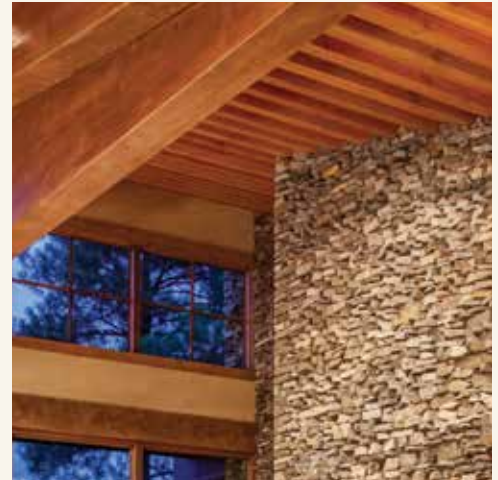

The Design Guidelines for Walnut Canyon will encourage you and your architect to explore new directions, exciting concepts, and new materials. There will be no one Walnut Canyon style, there will be a unifying philosophy of design based on architecture that celebrates the qualities of design of the mountains and pines of Northern Arizona in fresh ways. At Walnut Canyon, quality and design will come together in a way unlike any other.

Materials used at Walnut Canyon will be one of the key elements to creating great mountain style architecture. Exploration of unique materials, and material combinations and compositions, will be encouraged. Naturally based materials that complement the Northern Arizona mountain environment such as stone, steel, glass, and wood all in appropriate combinations, and compositions, will help homes blend in well, and will be a primary tool in creating exciting designs.
